THE PHILADELPHIA INQUIRER, speaking of the situation of the two states, says editorially:

"We are still more than another great battle is impending. We have not yet had our final battle-field of Antietam. Prisoners made at Sharpsburg are still awaiting trial.

"The rebels have the greater portion of the field of battle, and must now cross over to the south side of the river.

"Our army is at present in full force, and is rapidly marching to the south side of the potomac.

"The rebels are still in full force, and are rapidly marching to the south side of the potomac.
